Six persons, four of them children, had a close call to death Wednesday night about 8 o'clock when a machine in which they were riding went thru a fence and into the Desplaines river at Wadsworth, as the steering knuckle of the car broke. The auto was traveling at a fair rate of speed.

The owner and driver of the car was Robert Barrett, who lives just south of Millburn, it was reported. With him at the time was his wife and three children, the children ranging in age from 5 to 9 years. A neighbor's child, 9 years old, was also along.

According to reports from Wadsworth the steering knuckle of Barrett's car broke the car crashing through a wooden fence at the west end of the bridge and plunging down an embankment of 15 feet and out into the water. When the car finally came to a stop it was about 12 feet out from the bank of the river, the depth of the water at that point being around five feet.

No one lives nearby, the nearest home to the bridge being about 80 rods away and as there was no one around the bridge Barrett rescued his wife and the children alone. Fortunately he was not hurt any and was able to get out of the car and carry his wife and children to the banks.

It was said at Wadsworth that no member of the party suffered any injuries, although all were shaken up and badly frightened.

The machine, which was damaged considerably, was lifted from the water by means of a block and tackle and was taken to the Shea garage in Wadsworth.

Coroner John L. Taylor, who is in charge of the autopsy over the body of Frank E. Dow of Waukegan, which was exhumed last Wednesday reports that all of the organs were removed and sent to Chicago to the laboratory of Dr. E. H. Fisher, engaged by the Dow family to make an analysis. It will take a week or ten days to complete the analysis, the coroner said.

Dr. Taylor said that from examination he was satisfied that splenic leukemia, the disease given as the cause of the death at the time, was a contributory cause if not the only cause.

The body was exhumed and the autopsy started last Wednesday by the coroner on order of State's Attorney A. V. Smith, after request had been made by the Dow family. None of the expense is to be paid by the county, however, Dr. Taylor says, unless the laboratory findings show a cause of death other than splenic leukemia.

One of those active in having the body disinterred was Robert Dow. He was not talkative about the purpose of the autopsy at the time, saying that he and other members of the family merely desired to ascertain the cause of death, there being some doubt in their minds as to whether or not the real cause was splenic leukemia.

Frank Dow, who was connected with his brother, Robert, in operating the Dow Manufacturing company of Waukegan for years, died August 30, 1921, after a few weeks illness.

Marked Headway Made in Illinois Road Program

Illinois is making very marked progress in road construction, even though weather conditions recently have been a source of delay. According to the construction report issued by the State Division of Highways, a total of 796 miles of pavement has been completed thus far this year. This is approximately 115 miles more than had been completed at the same time last year.

During the week ending September 4, 47.58 miles of pavement were completed. 105 paving mixers, 9900 men, and 2475 teams were employed on the highways of the state in that week.

Frank T. Sheets, chief state highway engineer, in discussing the road situation, stated:

"The people of the state are justly proud of the great strides Illinois is making in road work. While all of us appreciate the great convenience afforded by hard roads, very few realize their meaning in dollars and cents.

In recent years, there has been considerable research work conducted to learn the comparative cost of operating motor vehicles on various types of road. It has been established that, when a road carrying 500 vehicles per day is surfaced with a high type pavement, an annual saving of approximately $6,575 per mile will be effected. All of Illinois' trunk line highways carry an average of at least 500 vehicles a day; many of them carry several times that number.

The present year will see about 1200 miles added to the state's paved road system. This year's construction alone, then, will afford a saving of approximately $8,000,000 each year for many years to come. If traffic on these roads should average 1000 vehicles per day—a figure which may reasonably be expected,—the saving in one year will amount to nearly $16,000,000 annually. In comparison with such savings, interest charges for bonds to finance this road construction sink into insignificance."

Farm Bureau to Hold Mass Meeting Saturday

There will be a mass meeting of all of the breeders of purebred dairy cattle at the Farm Bureau office, Libertyville, at 8:00 p. m., Saturday, September 20. At that time an organization will be perfected to cooperate with the Illinois Holstein-Friesian association and the Lake county Farm Bureau in putting over an intensive campaign against the scrub dairy bulls in Lake county. The Illinois Holstein-Friesian association has subscribed a large fund that is to be used as a revolving fund to support the campaign on a state-wide basis. Lake county desires to be the first county in which the campaign will be launched.

Mr. Robert Geiger, secretary of the Minnesota Holstein-Breeders' association will be in Libertyville for the meeting, to present to our breeders a plan that has been successfully operating in that state for the past year and a half in eradicating the scrub dairy bulls. Several other live stock workers of National fame will also be present.

Lake county feels honored by being selected as the first county to have actual assistance from the State Holstein association in being assisted to aid our county of the worthless scrub bulls. We have an opportunity to make ourselves famous as the leading dairy county of the state by being the first to increase the number of good bulls with our dairy herds. Many cows in the county at this time will not produce 400 pounds of milk in a year, while the cows of the Netherlands and of Switzerland produce more than twice that amount. The dairy business has grown to immense proportions in the past few years, and the dairy market has become a world market. The foreign cow has become serious competition for us, as she can produce much more efficiently than can our cows, and efficient production means higher production per cow and more net profit.

The Illinois Holstein-Friesian association is willing to cooperate to the extent of putting on the campaign for all of the dairy breeds. It shows their vision. The campaign contemplates placing three men in the county for a period of from 6 weeks to 2 months to personally visit our dairy men and assist those in need of better bulls in procuring the kind of dairy sire that will mean increased production and more money for our farmers who milk cows.

The old scrub bull must be replaced. Heat one time, was used where there was a combination of cheap labor, cheap feed and cheap land, and surely Lake county has no such combination.

The interest that is being manifested in the meeting to date indicates that the number that are taking an interest in this movement will make the meeting of September 20 one of the biggest purebred meetings ever held in the county.

ADVERTISING A FARM SALE

How much should a farmer spend to properly advertise his auction?

That is a question that only can be determined by the amount of property he has to sell.

The other day A. T. Middle, a farmer who lives 12 miles north of Boyceville, came in to advertise his auction of pure bred cattle, horses, farm machinery, etc.

Here's how he did it.

First he ordered 200 sale bills; 1575 were sent through the mails in specially printed envelopes; the balance were posted in various banks, stores and other business places in ten different towns.

Second: He ordered large display ads in six country papers.

The total cost of his advertising bills and one cent government envelopes amounted to within a few cents of $100.

With his auction advertising in the six newspapers and the 1575 sale bills that he mailed, he reached nearly 12,000 farmers.

And of course the folks will wonder where the 1500 buyers came from.

Advertising, my friend, turned the trick.—Boyceville Press.

Trap Shoot and Clam Bake at Rothers' Sunday

Through the initiative of the local Winchester dealer, Williams Bros., and Butch Rothers arrangements have been made with the Winchester Repeating Arms Company for the appearance here next Sunday at Rothers' Resort, Grass Lake of Benny Meents, of Ashkum, Ill., for a shooting program and talk on guns and ammunition.

Meents is one of the youngest of professionals, being only 25 years of age. His age doesn't prohibit him from being a great shooter. He was the doubles trapshooting champion of the United States in 1923 and is the present singles and all-round champion of Illinois. This is his second year in succession to hold the Illinois titles. He won this year with a score of 199 out of 200, the best score of the year. In the Prairie Zone shoot Meents was high over all the shooters with 757 breaks in 800 targets. It is customary for Meents to be high gun in the shoots he participates in. He was high in no less than five state championships in 1923 and had a number of runs better than 200.

On the 525 targets that Meents shot at in 1918 he averaged 8430. In 1919 Meents shot at 2125 targets for an average of .9294 and improved so much that he tied for the class L championship in the Grand American Handicap, breaking 99x100. In 1920 he averaged .9598 on 4760 targets and had a high run of 218. In 1921 Meents had a wonderful season, averaging .9720 on 4250 targets, winning the Jefferson Hotel Cup with 50 straight in the Illinois State Tournament, and in the 18 yards amateur championship in the Grand American he tied for second with 197 x 200. In the shoot off he was opposed by C. A. Gunning of Longmont, Colo., S. M. Crothers of Philadelphia and E. W. Daniels of Lynchburg, Va., seven shoot offs were necessary for Meents to win. He misses his fourth target and then continued until he won, breaking 171 straight, thereby winning the longest shoot off in the history of the Grand American Handicap Tournament.

In 1922 Meents won the doubles championship of the Great Lakes Zone with 86 in 50 pairs and finished the year with an average of .9663 on 2260 targets.

In 1923 he averaged .9695 on 4010 single targets and .8537 on 800 double targets. He will be up in the front ranks of the shooters again this year.

All his shooting has been done with a Winchester Model 12 and Repeater shells.

The shoot will commence at 10:00 o'clock sharp.

At 12:00 o'clock a real Rhode Island clam bake will be given by Butch Rothers. Butch has secured the services of Louis Hausman, who has the reputation of being the best in putting on a clam bake. Mr. Hausman is coming from the east on other business but will stop over and put on the clam bake for Butch.

Those who have never attended a clam bake will do well to take this in. It is a real treat and one not to be forgotten. Mr. Hausman will include in the bake, clams, bluefish, chicken, sweet corn, Irish potatoes, sweet corn and clam bullion.

Ducks Aplenty as the Season Opens Here

The hunting season opened with a bang early Tuesday morning and it was not long after sunrise that many of the hunters had secured their quota and were hustling home to get their first taste of duck for the season.

The ducks this year are flying heavier than have been seen in this section for a number of years and there should be some real sport.

Pete Malsack, agent at the Soo Line depot was arrested and taken to Kenosha Saturday evening. He was unable to make up the shortage the auditors found in his accounts.

Antioch Boys Second in State Judging Contest

Albert Herman, Lewis Barthel, Philip Simpson Gain Honors for Lake County

The Lake County Dairy Judging team, composed of Albert Herman, Philip Simpson, Lewis Barthel, with their coach, C. L. Kutil, agricultural teacher at the Antioch Township High School, returned to Antioch on Monday the possessors of a beautiful red ribbon, second award at the state judging contest held at Springfield, together with $28 in premiums.

The local boys came within two points of winning the state championship, and the honor of representing the state of Illinois at the National Dairy show. The winners, Bureau County team, scored 1471 and the Lake County team scored 1469. Bureau County is as many times winner in dairy judging contests, having won first prize at the Aurora state fair for the last three years.

That Mr. Kutil's boys made a good showing can be judged from the fact that the next nearest point scored was 250 points below his wards.

Antioch is proud of the showing that the boys from this section made, and also proud of the fact that all of these boys are products of its high school.

The winners of the prizes in order were: Bureau County, first; Lake County, second; Knox county, third; and St. Clair county, fourth.

Two Antioch Boys at State Fair This Week

Arthur Christensen and Charles Paddock of Antioch, and Emil Martens and Avery Vose, of Waukegan, who represent this county at the State Fair School for boys at Springfield this week, took an active part in the radio program given by the school at the Sears-Roebuck Station WLS on Wednesday, according to word received here by their friends. In addition to songs and "stunts" there were talks by Hon. Francis G. Blair, state superintendent of public instruction, W. S. Booth, principal of the school; and H. W. Mumford, dean of the college of agriculture of the University of Illinois. They spoke of the founding of the school and its meaning toward the betterment of life in rural Illinois.

Survey Dairy Situation in Illinois Region

One third of all the dairy cows in the state of Illinois is losing money, a third is making up for what the first third is losing, and the other third is reaping profits for their owners, according to a survey of the state dairy situation, just completed by the Blue Valley Creamery Institute. Better feeding and better breeding is the solution of this problem, the Institute experts declare.

"The state of Illinois," continues the report of the Institute, "has dairy cows in milk on 77 per cent of her farms. In 1880 the state had 6.96 per cent. In 1910 the state had 102 heads of all kinds of cattle per one thousand acres of improved land. Now in 1924, it has only 87 head. A few head more or less matters little. Have they improved in fourteen years? What will they be fourteen years from now? These are the questions on which the Institute's experts will enlighten the farmers.

"Farmers want happiness and contentment. To get it they must make money. There are two ways of doing this—get more money for what they produce or lower cost of production. A quarter saved in the grain cost of producing a hundred pounds of milk by feeding better milk making grain rations, a dime saved per one hundred pounds of pork, or dozen eggs, is money for the farmer. We don't need more cows, hogs or hens. We need better ones. More efficient animals mean lowered cost of manufacturing one hundred pounds of milk, pork, poultry, beef, mutton and eggs.

"The average cow in Illinois makes only 3044 pounds of milk, and only 2.4 per cent of all the dairy cattle in the state are purebred. Better feeding will raise production and lower costs per hundred pounds of milk. The daughters of good cows, sired by purebred bulls, will increase that production and further lower costs of production. The same is true with other animals. In 1919, the peak year, only 12 per cent of the entire state's income went to farmers. That is not enough," the Institute's experts point out.

There has been a rising tide of popularity in intensive farming. As agriculture is brought face to face with higher costs of production and farmers find that they cannot get by on highest priced land, it has been necessary to turn to diversification. Deflation has made every banker and farm leader see these things.

Highway Board Endorses Small Bond Issue

The State Board of Highways met recently at the Inter-State Fair, Kankakee, Senator Richard R. Ments, Ashkum, Chairman, Chas. M. Hayes, man, Chicago, F. R. Voelke Vienna, Arthur R. Hall, Danville, and J. M. Page, Jerseyville, and unanimously recommended Governor Len Small's $100,000,000.00 Hard Road Bond Issue as a safe, sane and sound business proposition to issue bonds against the anticipated automobile license fees.

The bond law provides first, the completion of the $50,000,000.00 bond issue system and then in addition about 5000 miles more of trunk line roads. These two systems when completed will place 99% of the people of the state within five miles of a hard road and 85% directly on the system of approximately 10,000 miles. The law further provides that no bonds be issued or sold until the roads are contracted for and the money is needed, and then only in such amounts as is necessary to pay for actual construction.

The bonds under both issues are to be paid out of the automobile license fees, both principal and interest, without one cent of tax on the real or personal property of the state. The automobilists of the state, the men who pay the bills, seem to be willing and anxious to stand the expense and the man who does not own an automobile will not be called upon to pay a cent toward the cost of this fine road system because not a cent of tax will be placed on the lands or property outside of the automobiles and trucks.

C. R. Miller, Director of Public Works and Buildings, and Frank T. Sheets, chief engineer, report that the world's record in road construction had been smashed during the past year when one mixer laid 2671 ft of standard 18-ft concrete pavement in one day, and the same outfit made another new record when it laid 10,405 ft of standard 18-ft concrete pavement in one week. During Governor Small's administration road building has gone steadily forward and the record shows the cost of construction has gone steadily downward under his policy of refusing to let contracts regardless of cost, and insisting that the state receive a dollars worth of road for every dollar expended. The average cost of one mile of standard 18-foot concrete pavement, including all grading, ordinary bridges and culverts has been $27,500 per mile during Governor Small's administration.

The construction record shows the following mileage: 1921, 406 miles; 1922, 741 miles; 1923, 1085 miles; this year to September 1st, 800 miles.

The board urges the next General Assembly to pass legislation and to provide for appropriations from the automobile license fees to build connection roads to all cities and villages of the state not now on the State Bond Issue Roads.

Burlington Brewery to Be Closed

The plant of the Burlington Cereal Products company on McHenry st., Burlington, operated by C. A. Dahn, who purchased the same last spring from the Finke-Uhen Brewing Co., is to be padlocked under the Volstead act for illicit brewing.

"Beer runners, who for the last month have been making Burlington their headquarters, are about to be wiped out.

Clark M. Perry, federal prohibition director, after receiving reports on beer running conditions in the neighboring city, last week sent out an edict to his agents, which is expected to put an end to illicit brewing and transporting there.

"Wipe them out," was Mr. Perry's command.

Agents immediately put into motion the machinery by which evidence is gathered for the grand jury. The brewery at Burlington was watched and a number of saloons were visited. Truck drivers who hauled the real beer to other cities were interrogated.

"We have the goods on them now," said Mr. Perry. "Further violations will simply mean an aggravated case of the brewery will be taken away on top of it."

And so another of the fifty remaining breweries in the state, licensed to make near beer, will be stricken from the list, shut down and placed under government seal, under provisions of the Volstead act "padlock" clause.

The brewery which is involved in the Burlington beer running is said to have done a land office business in a short period of operating. Whole caravans of trucks are said to have carried its products to the towns and cities along the highways radiating from the city.

Truck drivers who hauled to Milwaukee were paid $1 per case. Their trucks, often carried 250 and 300 cases. The work was done at night. In one instance, it is reported, a five truck laden with nine tons of beer broke through a culvert at a city outside of Burlington. This resulted in tying up the entire caravan.

"We know that there are a number of breweries in the state that are cheating," said Mr. Perry. "Of course courts with a force of only sixteen men for field work it is quite impossible to take care of the situation as well as we would like. However, we shall do the best we can."

It is difficult for the limited force of agents to watch the beer running operations because the breweries, in many instances, have private detectives employed who keep the beer runners constantly informed as to the movements of the agents. Only when the agents are removed from the neighborhood of a brewery will it operate.

The brew plans are usually equipped with apparatus which enables them to fill a caravan of trucks in a very short time. In four hours of operation it is possible to load twenty trucks, it was said. The work invariably is done at night.

Mr. Perry deplored the lethargy of the state prohibition agents and local police and sheriffs in enforcing the prohibition law.

"These things go on under the very noses of those who are best qualified to act, but they do nothing," he said. "Under such conditions it is not easy to enforce the law."

Farmers Bear Heavy Portion of School Tax, Survey Shows

The Illinois Agricultural Association's investigation of rural school problems, to which many Lake county farmers and teachers contributed, shows that the farmers have been paying fully 70 per cent of the community and township high school taxes in Illinois. This conclusion is based upon information obtained in an all-summer investigation into the records of county clerks in 35 counties in all sections of Illinois.

The survey shows that, although farmers pay 70 per cent of the community and township high school taxes, only 40 per cent of the pupils in these schools are farm boys and girls.

The report of the investigation includes, in addition to nearly 200 personal investigations made by C. B. Althaus, a University of Chicago student in education, a high percentage of replies to a questionnaire sent to 10,000 farmers asking for taxation figures and their personal opinion on the farmers' school problem.

Dr. G. W. Willett, superintendent of the Lyons County High School at LaGrange, who supervised the survey set down the following points in summarizing the information obtained in the replies to the questionnaire:

1. Universal interest is being shown by Illinois farmers in their educational problems.
 2. Practically all the farmers who answered the questionnaire intend to send their children to high school.
 3. A majority of farmers are opposed to consolidation under existing conditions.
 4. A majority favor the continuation of the one room school.
- It is the aim of the I. A. A. educational committee to determine where and how the farmer stands on educational matters and to report its findings to the Illinois Educational Commission which will make recommendations to the next General Assembly.

Everingham Finds Farm Bureau Spirit Better Than Ever

I don't think the Farm Bureau spirit and morale has ever been any better than it is at present," said A. C. Everingham who has been speaking at Farm Bureau picnics by arrangement of the Illinois Agriculture Association speakers bureau in commenting on the general atmosphere that has prevailed at the 12 County Farm Bureau picnics at which he has spoken.

Farm Bureau picnic attendance has been larger this year, on the average, according to Mr. Everingham, than ever before.

Lake County people will remember Mr. Everingham as the speaker at the Farm Bureau County picnic at Diamond Lake, August 22, 1923, when he spoke on Better Community Understanding.

"Baseball has been a popular feature this season," he said. "The crowds thicken as a whole have been the largest I have ever had. The people are greatly interested in farm problems, especially in measures intended to bring about equality for agriculture."

T. B. Tests Given to 50,000 Illinois Cattle Each Month

The work of eradicating tuberculosis from dairy herds in Illinois has grown to such an extent within the last few months that approximately 50,000 cattle are now tested each month, according to M. H. Petersen, director of the Illinois Agricultural Association tuberculosis eradication project.

One thousand, six hundred and sixty-six cattle on an average are tested in Illinois every 24 hours, and out of that number approximately 80, or 2 per cent are found to be tubercular. According to figures compiled by the United States Department of Agriculture, the average for the country is 3 1-3 per cent.

Lake county is one of the 58 Illinois counties now conducting an organized campaign against tuberculosis. During the month of July, County Veterinarian Grinnell tested 1003 cattle finding 97 reactors.

Last week the Board of Supervisors voted to renew the appropriation of $4,000 made a year ago to conduct the area work on T. B. eradication. They were well pleased with the work to Dr. Grinnell and favorable comments were made on the progress of the work to date.

For example a year ago only 36 herds were under federal supervision compared with 315 herds now. A year ago there were only 23 clean herds in the county compared with 184 clean herds now. Dr. Grinnell has tested 10,000 head of cattle, finding 1930 reactors. Over $50,000 in indemnities has already been received by our farmers for these reactors with more to come besides about $35,000 paid for the salvage produced from these animals. We have reason to feel proud of these results accomplished in less than one year.

"Penny Nails."

The term penny in connection with nails is always used in combination with prefixed numerals, such as four-penny, ten-penny, etc., to form an adjective. These adjectives now denote certain arbitrary sizes. Originally, they denoted the price per hundred of nails.

Judith
of BLUE LAKE RANCH
by Jackson Gregory

COPYRIGHT BY CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS

WHAT did you say about the new woman being a type? Well, hardly! She may be short-haired, because a majority of women are that today, but she is far from being, in generality, the strong-jawed, hard-visaged, masculine appearing figure which the cartoonists represent her to be. She is as numerous and as interesting in her variety as woman has ever been.

Get acquainted with Judith, the charming little boss of Blue Lake Ranch. You will meet a new woman, a really brand-new sort, one—in this respect not unusual—who would rather be a woman than a man, but, called upon to do a man's part, does it thoroughly. Circumstances called her into a unique line of endeavor. She carried it through in a man's way, the only way it could be done, but she made it more effective by some fascinatingly feminine touches.

Your "Dollars Do Double Duty" When SPENT AT HOME!

There's only one answer to the question:

"Where can I spend my dollars so that they'll not only benefit me personally by purchasing their full value's worth but where, in the course of time, they'll build for a greater community and make me more satisfied with both my neighbors and my surroundings?"

It Is--- IN ANTIOCH

BECAUSE—Here, and here only, can your dollars do "Double Duty."

First, they'll always get you the necessities of life at a lower cost than you could buy them for elsewhere. The personal interest our merchants take in each patron to see that he or she is always satisfied—often sacrificing profit—makes it possible.

Secondly, not only do your dollars go farthest, but—by trading here and keeping those dollars at home—you're contributing to our fair town's Progress and Prosperity. More schools, more attractive town—are only possible when every citizen puts his or her "shoulder to the wheel" and "pushes" with their "home spent" dollars.

We, the undersigned business and professional interests, always have and always will be strong for anything that is good for the community. But, remember, we need—YOUR COOPERATION!

"LONG LIVE THE KING"

Jackie Coogan's first Metro picture, "Long Live the King," will arrive at the Crystal theatre Saturday. This unusually beautiful picture, plus Jackie's wonderful acting, lives up to all the advance praise made for it all during the six months of its production in Hollywood.

Suffice it to say that in "Long Live the King" Jackie does some of the greatest work of his short career. For the first time a radical departure has been made in the type of role he portrays. In "Long Live the King" Jackie is a royal princeling and he is constantly surrounded by royal splendor.

In these days when women winning championships in outdoor games and athletic contests and successfully invading lines of endeavor that a past generation had set apart exclusively for men, it is not logical to have a heroine of fiction who takes a man's part in the management of a big enterprise and brings to bear the qualities of courage, coolness and daring especially called for in making the undertaking a success? It is decidedly logical, particularly in the West where girls on ranches are taught to shoot straight, tame outlaw horses, brand cattle and in general respects be qualified not only to take care of themselves, but to meet any exigency calling for judgment and nerve.

The boys of the Blue Lake outfit were pretty thoroughly disgusted when they learned they were to have a girl for a boss. Opinions changed, however, when a few of Judith's quiet exploits, performed under the stress of necessity and without any bravado or sacrifice of womanliness, proved her to be the best man on the big ranch. Judith did not seek the job of management. It was forced upon her through the death of her father and her realization that her foreman was a rascal bent upon wrecking the enterprise in the interests of a rival concern.

It was a stupendous job and the girl who could handle it successfully deserved to be the heroine of an exhilarating romance. Judith is decidedly welcome because she is a new type of heroine. She is all the more welcome from the fact that she is not an exaggerated type. There are plenty of girls in the West and elsewhere who, given such a grand old father to train them as Judith had, would be able to show the true steel which she exhibited; and like Judith, would remain sweet and womanly throughout. Judith will win readers just as she won the Blue Lake boys. It is only fair to reveal that there was one of those boys who held out against her surrender. He had old-fashioned notions of what a woman should be and what a woman can do. With the exception of Judith, he is the most interesting character in the story.

CHAPTER I

Bud Lee Wants to Know

Bud Lee, horse foreman of the Blue Lake ranch, sat upon the gate of the home corral, bulled a cigarette with slow brown fingers, and stared across the broken fields of the upper valley to the rosy glow above the pine-timbered ridge where the sun was coming up. His customary gravity was unusually pronounced.

"If a man's got the hunch an egg is bad," he mused, "is that a good and sufficient reason why he should go poking his fingers inside the shell? I want to know!"

Tommy Burkitt, the youngest wage-earner of the outfit and a profound admirer of all that tactfully, good humor and quick capability which went into the makeup of Bud Lee, approached from the ranch-house on the knoll. "Hi, Bud!" he called. "Trevors wants you. On the jump."

Burkitt stopped at the gate, looking up at Lee. "On the jump, Trevors said," he repeated.

For a moment Lee sat still, his cigarette unlighted, his broad black hat far back upon his close-cropped hair, his eyes serenely contemplative upon the pink of the sky above the pines. Then he slipped from his place and, though each single movement gave an impression of great leisureliness, it was but a flash of time until he stood beside Burkitt.

"Stick around a wee bit, laddie," he said gently, a lean brown hand resting lightly on the boy's square shoulder. "A man can't see what is on the cards until they're tipped, but it's always a fair gamble that between dawn and dusk I'll gather up my string of colts and crowd on. If I do, you'll want to come along?"

He smiled at young Burkitt's eagerness and turned away toward the ranch-house and Bayne Trevors, thus putting an early end to an enthusiastic acquiescence.

"They ain't no more men ever fooled like him," meditated Tommy, in an approval so profound as to be little less than out-and-out devotion.

And, indeed, one might ride up and down the world for many a day and not find a man who was Bud Lee's superior in "the things that count." As tall as most, with sufficient shoulders, a slender body, narrow-hipped, he carried himself as perhaps his forebear walked in the days when open forests or sheltered caverns housed them, with a little graceful, nervous born of the perfect play of superb physical development. His muscles, even in the slight movement, flowed fluidly; he had slipped from his place on the corral gate less like a man than like some great, splendid cat. The skin of his hands, throat, was very dark, whether by inheritance or because of long exposure to sun and wind, it would have been difficult to say. The eyes were dark, very keen, and yet reminiscently grave. From under their black brows there had the habit of appearing to be reluctantly withdrawn from some great distance to come to rest, steady and calm, upon the man with whom he chanced to be speaking.

The gaunt, sure-footed form was lost to Tommy's eyes; Lee had passed beyond the dump of wild lilacs whose glistening, heart-shaped leaves screened the open court about which the ranch-house was built. A strangely elaborate ranch-house, this one, set here so far apart from the world of rich residences. There was a score of rooms in the great, one-story, rambling edifice of rudely squared timbers set in field-stone and cement, rooms now closed and locked; there were flower-gardens still cultivated daily by Jose, the half-breed; a pretty court with a fountain and many roses, cut upon which a dozen doorways looked; wide verandas with glimpses beyond of fireplaces and long expanses of polished floors. For, until recently, this had been not only the headquarters of Blue Lake ranch, but the home as well of the chief of its several owners. Luke Sanford, whose own efforts alone had made him at forty-five a man to be reckoned with, had followed his fancy here extensively and expensively, allowing himself this one luxury of his many lean, hard years. Then, six months ago, just as his ambitions were stepping to fresh heights, just as his hands were filling with newer, greater endeavor, there had come the mishap in the mountains and Sanford's tragic death.

Lee passed silently through the courtyard and came to the door at the far end. The door stood open; within was the office of Bayne Trevors, general manager. Lee entered, his hat still far back upon his head. The sound of his boots upon the bare floor caused Trevors to look up quickly.

"Hello, Lee," he said quietly. "Wait a minute, will you?"

Quite a different type from Lee, Bayne Trevors was heavy and square and bald. His eyes were the gliding gray eyes of a man who is forceful, dynamic, the sort of man who is a better captain than lieutenant, whose hands are strong to grasp life by the throat and demand that she stand and deliver. Only because of his wide and successful experience, of his initiative, of his way of quick, decisive action, had Lee Sanford chosen Bayne Trevors as his right-hand man in so colossal a venture as the Blue Lake ranch. Only because of the same pushing, vigorous personality was he this morning general manager, with the unlimited authority of a dictator over a petty principality.

In a moment Trevors lifted his frowning eyes from the table, turning in his chair to confront Lee, who stood loquacious in leisurely manner against the door-jamb.

"That young idiot wants money again," he growled, his voice as sharp and quick as his eyes. "As if I didn't have enough to contend with already."

"Meaning young Hampton, I take it?" said Lee quietly.

Trevors nodded savagely.

"Telegram. Caught it over the line the last thing last night. We'll have to sell some horses this time, Lee."

Lee's eyes narrowed imperceptibly. "I didn't plan to do any selling for six months yet," he said, not in explanation but merely in explanation.

"They're not ready."

"How many three-year-olds have you got in your string down in the Big Meadow?" asked Trevors crisply.

"Counting those eleven Red Duke colts?"

"What Would You Say to Fifty Dollars a Head?"

sharp and quick as his eyes. "As if I didn't have enough to contend with already."

"They're not ready."

"How many three-year-olds have you got in your string down in the Big Meadow?" asked Trevors crisply.

"Counting those eleven Red Duke colts?"

"Counting everything. How many?"

"Seventy-three."

The general manager's pencil wrote upon the pad in front of him "73," then swiftly multiplied it by 50. Lee saw the result, 3,650 set down with the dollar sign in front of it. He said nothing.

"What would you say to fifty dollars a head for them?" asked Trevors, whirling again in his swivel chair. "Three thousand six fifty for the bunch?"

"I'd say the same," answered Lee deliberately, "that I'd say to a man that offered me two bits for Daylight or Ladybird. I just naturally wouldn't say nothing at all."

Trevors smiled cynically. "What are the seventy-three colts worth, then?"

"Right now, when I'm just ready to break 'em in," said Bud Lee thoughtfully, "the worst of that string is worth fifty dollars. I'd say twenty of the herd ought to bring fifty dollars a head; twenty more ought to bring thirty; ten are worth seventy-five; ten are worth an even hundred; seven of the Red Duke stock are good for a hundred and a quarter; the other four Red Dukes and the three Robert the Devils are worth a hundred and fifty a head. The whole bunch, an easy fifty-seven hundred little iron men."

He stared hard at Trevors a moment. And then, partially voicing the thought with which he had grappled upon the corral gate, he added meditatively: "There's something a little peculiar about an outfit that will listen to a man offer fifty bucks on a string like that."

His eyes, cool and steady, met Trevors' in a long look which was little short of a challenge.

"Just how far does that go, Lee?" asked the manager curtly.

"As far as you like," replied the horse foreman coolly. "Are you going to sell those three-year-olds for thirty-six hundred?"

"Yes," answered Trevors bluntly. "I am. What are you going to do about it?"

"Ask for my time, I guess," and although his voice was gentle and even pleasant, his eyes were hard. "I'll take my own little string and move on."

"Curse it!" cried Trevors heatedly. "What difference does it make to you? What business is it of yours how I sell? You draw down your monthly pay, don't you? I raised you a notch last month without your asking for it, didn't I?"

"That's so," agreed the foreman evenly. "It's a damn nose of the boys have any kick coming at the wages."

For a moment Trevors sat growling up at Lee's inscrutable face. Then he laughed shortly. "Look here, Bud," he said good-humoredly, an obvious seriousness of purpose under the light tone. "I want to talk with you before you do anything rash. Sit down." But Lee remained standing, merely saying, "Shoot."

"I wonder," explained Trevors, "if the boys understand just the size of the job I've got in my hands? You know that the ranch is a million-dollar outfit; you know that you can ride fifteen miles without getting off the home-range; you know that we are doing a dozen different kinds of farming and stock-raising. But you don't know just how short the money is! There's that young idiot now, Hampton. He holds a third interest and I've got to consider what he says, even if he is a weak-minded, lubber pup that can't do anything but spend an inheritance like the born fool he is. His share is mortgaged; I've tried to pay the mortgage off. I've got to keep the interest up. Interest alone amounts to three thousand dollars a year. Think of that! Then there's Luke Sanford dead and his one-third interest left to another young fool, a girl! Every two weeks she's writing for a report, eternally butting in, making suggestions, hampering me until I'm sick of the job."

"That would be Luke's girl, Judith?"

"Yes. Two of the three owners' kids, writing me at every turn. And the third owner, Timothy Gray, the only sensible one of the lot, has just up and sold out his share, and I suppose I'll be hearing next that some superannuated female in an old lady's home has inherited a fortune and bought him out. And now you, the best man I've got, throw me down!"

"I don't see," said Lee slowly, after a brief pause, "just what good it does to sell a good string of horses like they were sheep. Half of that herd is real horse-flesh, I tell you."

"Well," snapped Trevors, "suppose you are right. I've got to raise three thousand dollars in a hurry. Where will I get it?"

"Who is offering fifty dollars a head for those horses?" asked Lee abruptly.

"It might be the Big Western Lumber company."

"Yes."

"Uh-huh. Well, you can kill the rats in your own barn, Trevors. I'll go look for a job somewhere else."

Bayne Trevors, his lips tightly compressed, his eyes steady, a faint, angry flush in his cheeks, checked what words were flowing to his tongue and looked keenly at his foreman. Lee met his regard with cool unconcern. Then, just as Trevors was about to speak, there came an interruption.

The quiet of the morning was broken by the quick thud of a horse's shod hoofs on the hard ground of the courtyard. Bud Lee in the doorway turned to see a strange horse drawn up so that upon its four bunched hoofs it stood to a standstill; saw a slender figure, which in the early light he mistook for a boy, slip out of a saddle. And then, suddenly, a girl, the spurs of her little riding-boots making jingling music on the veranda, her riding-quirt swinging from her wrist, had stepped by him and was looking with bright, snapping eyes from him to Trevors.

"I am Judith Sanford," she announced briefly, and there was a note in her young voice which went ringing, bell-like, through the still air. "Is one of you men Bayne Trevors?"

A quick, shadowy smile came and went upon the lips of Bud Lee. It struck him that she might have said in just that way: "I am the queen of England and I am running my own kingdom!" He looked at her with eyes filled with open interest and curiosity, making swift appraisal of the flush in the sun-browned cheeks, the confusion of dark, curling hair disturbed by her furious riding, the vivid, red-blooded beauty of her. Mouth and eyes and the very carriage of the dark head upon her superb white throat announced boldly and triumphantly that here was no wax-petted lily of a lady but rather a maid whose blood, like the blood of the father before her, was turbulent and hot and must boil like a wild mountain-stream at opposition.

Her eyes, a little darker than Trevors', were the eyes of fighting stock.

Trevors, irritated already, turned hard eyes up at her from under corrugated brows. He did not move in his chair. Nor did Lee stir except that now he removed his hat.

"I am Trevors," said the general manager curtly. "And, whether you are Judith Sanford or the queen of Slum, I am busy right now."

"You talk soft with me, Trevors!" cried the girl passionately. "If you want to hold your job five minutes, I'll tolerate none of your high and mighty airs!"

Trevors laughed at her, a sneer in his laugh. "I talk the way I talk," he answered roughly. "If people don't like the sound of it they don't have to listen! Lee, you round up those seventy-three horses and crowd them over the ridge to the lumber camp. Or, if you want to quit, quit now and I'll send a sane man."

The hot color mounted higher in the girl's face, a new anger leaped up in her eyes.

"Take no orders this morning that I don't give," she said, for a moment turning her eyes upon Lee. And to Trevors: "Busy or not busy, you take time right now to answer my questions. I've got your reports and all they tell me is that you are going in the hole as fast as you can. What business have you got selling off my young steers at a sacrifice?"

"Go, get those horses, Lee," said Trevors, ignoring her.

Again she spoke to Lee, saying crisply: "What horses is he talking about?"

With his deep gravity at its deepest, Bud Lee answered: "All L-S stock. The eleven Red Duke three-year-olds; the two Robert the Devil colts; Brown Babe's filly, Comet."

"All mine, every running hoof of 'em," she said, cutting in. "What does Trevors want you to do with them? Give them away for ten dollars a head or cut their throats?"

"Look here—" cried Trevors angrily, on his feet now.

"You shut up!" commanded the girl sharply. "Lee, you answer me."

"He's selling them fifty dollars a head," he said with a secret joy in his heart as he glanced at Trevors' flushed face.

"Fifty dollars!" Judith gasped. "Fifty dollars for a Red Duke colt like Comet?"

She stared at Lee as though she could not believe it. He merely stared back at her, wondering just how much she knew about horseflesh.

Then, suddenly, she whirled again upon Trevors.

"I came out to see if you were a crook or just a fool," she told him, her words like a slap in his face. "No man could be so big a fool as that! You—your crook!"

The muscles under Bayne Trevors' jaws corded. "You've said about enough," he shot back at her. "And even if you do own a third of this outfit, I'll have you understand that I am the manager here and that I do what I like."

From her bosom she snatched a big envelope, tossing it to the table. "Look at that," she ordered him. "You big thief! I've mortgaged my holding for fifty thousand dollars and I've bought in Timothy Gray's share. I swing two votes out of three now, Bayne Trevors. And the first thing I do is run you out, you great big grafting futehead! You would chuck Luke Sanford's outfit to the dogs, would you? Get off the ranch. You're fired!"

"You can't do a thing like this!" snapped Trevors, after one swift glance at the papers he had whisked out of their covering.

"I can't, can't I?" she jeered at him. "Don't you fool yourself for one little minute! Pack your little trunk and hammer the trail."

"I'll do nothing of the kind. Why, I don't know even who you are! You say that you are Judith Sanford." He shrugged his massive shoulders. "How do I know what game you are up to?"

"You can't bluff me for two seconds, Bayne Trevors," she blazed at him. "You know who I am, all right. Send for Sunny Harper," she ended sharply.

"Discharged three months ago," Trevors told her with a show of teeth. "Johnny Hodge, then," she commanded. "Or Ted Bruce or Bing Kelley. They all know me."

"Fired long ago, all of them," laughed Trevors, "to make room for competent men."

"To make room for more crooks!" she cried, her own brown hands balled into fists so fiercely that Bud Lee's head had been. Then for the third time she turned upon Lee. "You are one of his new thieves, I suppose?"

"Thank you, ma'am," said Bud Lee gravely.

"Well, answer me. Are you?"

"No, ma'am," he told her, with no hint of a twinkle in his calm eyes. "Leastwise, not his exactly. You see, I do all my killing and highway robbing on my own books. It's just a way I have."

"Well," Judith sniffed, "I don't know. It will be a jolt to me if there's a square man left on the ranch! Go down to the bunk-house and tell the cook I'm here and I'm hungry as a wildcat. Tell him and any of the boys that are down there that I've come to stay and that Trevors is fired. They take orders from me and no one else. And hurry, if you know how. Goodness knows, you look as though it would take you half an hour to turn around!"

"Thank you, ma'am," said Bud Lee. "But you see I had just told Trevors here he could count me out. I'm not working for the Blue Lake any more. As I go down to the corral, shall I send up one of the boys to take your orders?"

There was a little smile under the last words, just as there was a little smile in Bud Lee's heart at the thought of the boys taking orders from a little slip of a girl. Inside he was chuckling, vastly delighted with the comedy of the morning.

"She's a sure-enough little wonder-bird, all right," he mused. "But, say, what does she want to butt in on a man's-size job for, I want to know?"

"Lee," called Trevors, "you take orders from me or no one on this ranch. You can go now. And just keep your mouth shut."

Bud Lee was turning to go out and down to his horse when he saw the look in Trevors' eyes, a look of consuming rage. The general manager's voice had been hoarse.

"D—n you," shouted Trevors, "get out!"

"Cut out the swear-words, Trevors," said Lee with quiet sternness. "There's a lady here."

"Lady!" scoffed Trevors. He laughed contemptuously. "Where's your lady? That?" and he leveled a scornful finger at the girl. "A ranting tough of a female who brings a breath of the stables with her and scolds like a fish-wife..."

"Shut up!" said Lee, crossing the room with quick strides, his face thrust forward a little.

"You shut up!" It was Judith's voice as Judith's hand fell upon Bud Lee's shoulder, pushing him aside. "If I couldn't take care of myself do you think I'd be fool enough to take over a little job like running the Blue Lake? Now—" and with blazing eyes she confronted Trevors—"If you've got any more nice little things to say, suppose you say them to me!"

Trevors' temper had had ample provocation and now stood naked and hot in his hard eyes. In a blind instant he laid his tongue to a word which would have sent Bud Lee at his throat. But Judith stood between them and, like an echo to the word, came the resounding slap as Judith's open palm smote Trevors' cheek.

"You wildcat!" he cried. And his two big hands flew out, seeking her shoulders.

"Stand back!" called Judith. "Just because you are bigger than I am, don't make any mistake! Stand back I tell you!"

Bud Lee marveled at the swiftness with which her hand had gone into her blouse and out again, a small-caliber revolver in the steady fingers now. He had never known a man—himself possibly excepted—quicker at the draw.

But Bayne Trevors, from whose make-up cowardice had been omitted, laughed sneeringly at her and did not stand back. His two hands out before him, his face crimson, he came on.

"Fool!" cried the girl. "Fool!" Still he came on. Lee gathered himself to spring.

Judith fired. Once, and Trevors' right arm fell to his side. A second time, and Trevors' left arm hung limp like the other. The crimson was gone from his face now. It was dead white. Little beads of sweat began to form on his brow.

Lee turned astonished eyes to Judith.

"Now you know who's running this outfit, don't you?" she said coolly. "Lee, have a team hitched up to carry Trevors wherever he wants to go. He's not hurt much; I just winged him. And go tell the cook about my breakfast."

But Lee stood and looked at her. He had no remark to offer. Then he turned to go upon her bidding. As he went down to the bunk-house he said softly under his breath: "Well, I'm d—d. I most certainly am!"

Securities Law Saves Millions for Investors

Wild Cat Salesmen Are Kept Out of Illinois by Blue Sky Provisions.

Since the securities law was enacted five years ago, it has kept out of the state more than $415,000,000 in doubtful or fraudulent securities, Secretary of State Louis L. Emmerson declared today.

The law, drawn in Mr. Emmerson's office to take the place of an act which did not prove successful, requires all companies desiring to sell securities in this state to qualify by filing detailed statements regarding the nature of the industry, the character of the personnel and the financial condition of the company.

If the information submitted is satisfactory, the application is filed and the securities are listed for sale in the state. If the information submitted is not satisfactory, the application is denied and the securities of the company cannot legally be sold in Illinois.

Classes of Securities.

For the purposes of the administration of the law, all securities are divided into four classes. Gilt-edge securities, such as bank stocks, first mortgage bonds, etc., the inherent qualities of which insure their sale and disposition without fraud, do not come under the provisions of the law.

Neither do conservative securities, when disposed of by persons and in the manner provided by law.

Class C securities include those which are based on an established income and Class D securities include those based on prospective income.

Securities included in both of these classes are subject to the restrictions of the law and before they can be sold a statement must be filed with the secretary of state showing the standing of the company, its officers, assets, liabilities and income. These statements are a matter of record and may be seen by those interested.

Can't Guarantee Returns.

"It is, of course, evident," Secretary Emmerson said, "that no one can guarantee a return on an investment in a speculative enterprise and the purchase of any stock in a company on the basis of future earnings is always more or less speculative."

"All the securities department of the secretary of state's office can do is to examine, for the information of prospective investors, data necessary for judgment as to the prospects of the company, and, of course, if certain standards have not been met, to refuse to permit the sale of the stock to Illinois investors."

"More than $1,000,000,000 in securities based on established income and $385,000,000 in speculative securities have been approved in Illinois since the enactment of the securities act. At the same time, more than $45,000,000 of securities based on established income and more than $185,000,000 of speculative securities, or a total of $180,000,000, has been rejected for sale in Illinois."

Without doubt much more in doubtful and fraudulent securities has been kept out of the state because officers of these companies knew that it was useless to apply for permission to sell.

"The Illinois securities law in part or in whole has been used as a model in a number of other states."

$15,000 in Prizes for Better Home Lighting

The improvement of eyesight, the promotion of higher-grade living conditions and greater all around home comfort for the American family are principles underlying the "Better Home Lighting Activity" which is being sponsored by the National Lighting Educational Committee.

Prizes ranging from $15,000 model electric home to college scholarships, will be offered to the school children of the entire nation by this Committee.

Residents of this community and surrounding territory are to have the same opportunity of competing for these awards as are those of other sections of the country.

The "Better Home Lighting Plan," as constituted, has been endorsed by prominent educators and others interested in the conservation of eyesight and the improvement of living conditions. Schools throughout the nation are to co-operate in the movement because of its educational nature.

Various mediums will be utilized to bring the entire subject to the attention of every person. To accentuate interest in the various local communities in the 48 states, arrangements are being made to distribute local and district prizes. In fact, contestants for the national awards will be chosen from the ranks of winners in the district and local contests.

The competition will be in the nature of a home lighting essay contest conducted among the children of high school age or under, who are enrolled in the public, parochial and private schools. District judges will be named to choose winners in the local communities and districts, while the judges for the national prizes will include some of the leading educational authorities in the country. William McAndrew, Superintendent of Schools in Chicago, Mrs. William Brown Melony, editor of the Delin, Magazine, Miss Sarah L. Rhodes, principal of Public School No. 23 in Brooklyn and Franklin T. Griffith, President of the National Electric Light Association have been named judges. To these will be added a prominent illuminating engineer and one other.

The principal national award of a $15,000 home was arranged as the result of a prize competition among five thousand architects in co-operation with the American Institute of Architects.

In addition to the electric home and college scholarships, many other prizes of smaller value will constitute the list of national awards.

1 quart of raw rhubarb cut in small pieces
4 seedless oranges
3 pounds of sugar
1 tablespoon of orange juice
1 tablespoon of grated orange rind
Put all in a preserving kettle. Stir until sugar is dissolved. Cook slowly until thick. This takes about two hours.

Strawberries, sugar and rhubarb, cooked together this way, makes a wonderful jam.

GRAPE JELLY

Wash and stem grapes. Cook the grapes down. Then strain. To every cup of juice add 1 cup of sugar. Bring to the boiling point and then boil exactly 20 minutes.
Put in glasses and seal after it has set.

GRAPE CONSERVE

1 pound of grapes
½ pound of sugar
1 cup of chopped raisins
1 cup of chopped nuts
Bring the grapes and sugar to a boil. They boil ten minutes—add the nuts and raisins and cook another 10 minutes.

COOKING HINTS

Cold cooked liver, kidney or steak mixed with salad dressing makes a fine sandwich paste.

Where tomato sauce is called for, it is very much quicker to use canned tomato soup.

Save canned pineapple juices to flavor cornstarch pudding.

Black walnuts give to dishes a deliciously different flavor that any hostess loves to obtain.

Black walnuts add immensely when served with fruit salad.

Salted black walnuts and pecans make an agreeable change for the nut dish.

LUMP SAVER

When gravy, cream sauce of custards lump, beat vigorously with egg beater for a moment and lumps will disappear.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

To Steam Velvet

As the winter months approach we are all thinking of clothes. Some of our old velvet dresses or goods could be economically put to use if we only knew how to steam them. Here is a method:—

Heat an iron and place it on its side. Fold several thicknesses of wet cloth over the iron and as soon as the steam begins to rise, draw the velvet slowly back and forth across the edge of the iron, right side up. As soon as the mark caused by crushing disappears place the velvet on a smooth surface to dry.

STAINED GLASSES

Stained glasses are very nearly as undesirable as nicked china. The nicked china can not be made right, but the stained glasses can.

Take either a mixture of vinegar and salt or lemon and salt and rub well over the stain. Then wash thoroughly and glass will resume its clearness.

Use for Clothes Pins

Use pinch clothes pins for pinning bed room curtains back. The clothes pins can be made very pretty by painting them to blend with colors in the room.

COCKLEBURS FOUND POISONOUS TO LIVESTOCK AND POULTRY

Cocklebur plants are poisonous to swine, cattle, sheep, and chickens, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. This weed has long been suspected, but many persons thought that deaths reported from this cause were produced by the mechanical action of the burrs rather than by the toxic effect of the plant. While the burrs may produce some mechanical injury, and while the seeds are very poisonous, stock poisoning, stock poisoning, the department says, is caused by feeding on the very young plants before the department of true leaves.

To avoid losses from this cause the most important thing is to prevent the animals from eating the weed. If there is a shortage of good they may eat enough of the young cockleburs to cause serious results. Feeding milk to pigs immediately after they have eaten the weed has proved beneficial, probably because of fat content. Good results also may be expected by feeding them bacon grease, lard, or linseed oil.

Flaming Barriers

If you have ever seen a forest fire, you will not need to ask what is the biggest scene or series of scenes in this picture. And there is a genuine forest fire in "Flaming Barriers." The picture was so timed that it was made when actual fires were raging in the northern California timber lands and the whole company rushed to location in time to take advantage of them. One of the big scenes shows an aeroplane caught in the fierce upward draught from the flames, with a girl in sole charge of the machine. Below there is a yawning furnace and ahead and behind stretch the flames. Another big scene is one in which Antonio Moreno drives his car across the bridge with the fire licking across from both sides and the tips of the flames forming an arch above his head. There are scenes in this picture wherein the heroine is working just as hard to defeat the hero as she later works to help him. Wait until you see the fight in the road between the hero and Pickens and his hired deputy. The prize is not alone the girl and the fire-truck, but the human lives dependent upon it.

An Allan Dwan production of Rex Beach's story

Big Brother

One of the unwritten laws of the Car Barn gang spells trouble for any member who dares molest or harm a woman. And so it is that Cokey Joe Miller is beaten up by Jimmy Donovan, leader of the gang, though a gentleman who has become a gangster by circumstances, for insulting Kitty Costello, the angel of the Car Barn district who appeals strongly to Jimmy's finer nature. Resenting the humiliation, Cokey Joe goes to Mike Navarro, leader of a gang of rival gunmen and informs him of the oncoming greatest social event, the annual dance of the Pat McGraw Pastime Club where he could "croak" Donovan and win for himself the leadership of all the gangs in New York as easy as falling off a log. Navarro and his gang attend the dance in a body and the inevitable fight and general pandemonium follows. See this gripping gangster story written as no one but Rex Beach could write it.

Wild Bill Hickok

The story of "Wild Bill Hickok" deals with Bill Hickok, known throughout the west as "Wild Bill", who was for many years one of the most conspicuous figures the frontier of fifty years ago ever produced. It tells how Bill got his name, how he battled against lawlessness and became a terror to all who violated the moral code that prevailed along the western fringe of civilization. It introduces Calamity Jane, another celebrated frontier character who loves Bill, but in vain, for the gun fighter secretly loves a girl from the east. Jane's jealousy is aroused, and when Bill becomes partly blind, she serves as his shield against his enemies. When McQueen, a ruffian, hears of this, he sees a chance for revenge, but Bill beats him to it in one of the most spectacular gun battles ever shown on the screen.
